We make money in a way that creates conflicts with your interests. You should understand and ask us about these conflicts because they can affect the services we provide to you. Here are some examples to help you understand what this means:

How else does your firm make money and what conflicts of interest do you have?	 Examples of ways we make money that conflicts with your interest: We are paid a transaction-based commission for each investment. This transaction-based commission is a percentage of the amount you invest. Therefore, we have an incentive for you to invest more. We engage in market-making and proprietary trading that may be related to transactions conducted on behalf of our retail customers. This may represent a conflict of interest between us and our retail investor customers. We sometimes act as a principal on certain trades, meaning that we may buy or sell securities to you from our own account. We do not take a commission on these trades, but we do earn money by assessing a mark-up or a mark-down. Buying and selling securities to customers on our behalf is a conflict because it can create an incentive for us to encourage customers to buy securities for services we cannot provide. These unaffiliated firms charge fees and commissions of which we receive a portion. Potential conflicts may arise if we refer services for othe purpose of generating revenue. We will disclose these types of revenue sharing agreement. We do not receive payment for order flow from market centers to which we route orders, but we may incur fees or receive rebates for orders executed on specific equities exchange (such as NYSE ARCA). Rebates are generally for limit orders required to be displayed on exchange per the SEC Limit Order Display Rule but may also include marketable orders, subject to our best execution requirements. We offer sweep account options, in which the excess cash balances of your securities account are swept into an interest paying account daily. The sweep programs are offered by non-affiliated banks and broker-dealers who keep a portion of the interest earned in the account. The sponsors of these programs share a portion of that revenue with our clearing firm, WDCO, which can create a potential conflict. Specific information about this program can be fo

This transaction-based fee is a percentage of the amount you invest. Therefore, our financial professionals have an incentive for you to invest more. Your brokers may receive a higher payout if the commissions they earn in a given period reach a certain threshold. This conflict is important for you to understand because you broker may attempt to generate more commissions to obtain higher payout thresholds.
